City Council won't fight mayor's veto of giant digital billboard

PHILADELPHIA. Following two years of legislative battles over the issue, the City Council has for now given up its fight to erect a 10,000-square-foot digital wall wrap on the Electric Factory building at 8th and Callowhill streets. Councilman Mark Squilla on Thursday announced that following Mayor Michael Nutter's veto of a bill allowing the signage – a portion of which would have given funding to local schools – he would not seek an override vote. Bob Brady saves Philly bike race

PHILADELPHIA. Congressman Bob Brady on Thursday announced that, in the wake of the cancellation of the 2013 Philadelphia International Cycling Championship due to financial woes, he's assembled a new leadership team to host a new bike race this year.

"The mayor has called for a premier cycling event, and the team we have pulled together intends to deliver nothing less for the city of Philadelphia in 2013," Brady said. "As long as there is a wall in Manayunk, there will be a world-class cycling event in Philadelphia."

The newly titled Philly Cycling Classic will be directed by Robin Morton of G4 Productions. More information regarding sponsorship and scheduling is expected in the coming weeks. METRO

Council may restrict access to tanning beds

PHILADELPHIA. City Councilman Bill Greenlee on Thursday introduced legislation that would require the city's indoor tanning facilities to issue written warnings about the danger of artificial sunlight.

"There is a clear and ever-increasing risk of cancer ... for those who are exposed to indoor tanning beds," he said.

The legislation would also require permission from legal guardians for minors to tan and ban tanning for anyone under 14 without a doctor's note. METRO

Gov. Corbett serves up plan to privatize Pa. liquor sales

Proposal would make beer and wine available at grocery and convenience stores Opponents: It's bad for jobs and local biz

RICARD LARMA/METRO

Corbett visited Philadelphia on Thursday to announce his plan to privatize liquor sales within the next four years.

If Gov. Tom Corbett's plan to privatize Pennsylvania's liquor sales is approved, beer and wine will be available for purchase at grocery stores, big-box retailers and corner stores.

Corbett presented his plan Thursday during a visit to Philadelphia.

"Here in Philadelphia, we know that there are a few people — no, make that many people — that get in their cars and travel across those bridges or travel down 95 and over to Delaware or New Jersey to buy their alcohol," he said. "I want a system that gives our people the flexibility to have their purchases here in Pennsylvania."

Corbett's plan would, over the next four years, allow customers to purchase beer and wine from grocery stores and big-box retailers, buy six-packs from convenience stores and obtain takeout bottles of wine from restaurants.

It would also allow beer distributors that obtain the proper licenses to become "one-stop shops" slinging wine, liquor and six-packs. They can currently only sell beer by the keg or case.

"This proposal would allow the number of establishments to be naturally driven by the free market, as it is in other states," Corbett said.

Aside from Utah, Pennsylvania is the only state that controls its own liquor sales.

"Simply put, I am proposing that Pennsylvania join the ranks of those 48 other states and once and for all get out of the business of selling wine and liquor, get out of the business of being a monopoly," Corbett said.

An estimated $1 billion in revenue from the auction of retail and wholesale liquor licenses, as well as from stepped-up enforcement and penalties of alcohol sale violations included in the plan, will go toward public schools.

Reactions from consumers

Consumers on Twitter, for the most part, rejoiced over the prospect of the increased convenience and choices the plan would offer.

"PA liquor stores potentially going away? F—k yeah welcome to the rest of America!" @ROBOTHERO

"I'm very excited about Governor Corbett's plan to privatize the liquor board. The government shouldn't be the only seller in a free market." @DARIN22B

"PA bout to have a one stop shop, liquor beer grocery store all in one." @_STACKZXO

But not everyone was so happy.

"Ya know who loves @GovernorCorbett's cynical plan to sell off our liquor stores? CVS, Walgreens, Rite-Aid and Walmart." @TETTEMER

Reactions from stakeholders

Some stakeholders decried what they say are threats to middle-class unionized jobs and small businesses, as well as a blow to state revenue.

"We all know what will become of our distributors and taverns that rely on beer sales and have adapted in order to compete in a closed system. They will fail and those local businesses that support our little-league teams and volunteer firefighter organizations will be lost, replaced by indifferent big-box stores run by huge corporations." STATE SEN. JIM FERLO

"It's nice that the governor has acknowledged that he created a school funding crisis, but our students shouldn't have to count on liquor being available on every corner in order to have properly funded schools. We need to restore the nearly $1 billion in education cuts made by Gov. Corbett with an adequate and sustainable funding plan, not with money that doesn't exist." PENNSYLVANIA STATE EDUCATION ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT MIKE CROSSEY

"The governor is targeting 5,000 family-sustaining jobs and more than $500 million a year in taxes and profits that this valuable, publicly held asset provides." PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED FOOD AND COMMERCIAL WORKERS UNION LOCAL 1776 WENDELL W. YOUNG IV

"The governor's fixation with privatization now includes a bizarre and unhealthy attempt to tie education achievement to what can only be described as a one-time alcohol-funded stimulus package." STATE SEN. JOHN YUDICHAK

Nine Philadelphia judges indicted in traffic ticket fixing

Nine current and former Philadelphia Traffic Court judges were indicted for fraud, conspiracy and other charges on Thursday in what prosecutors called a culture of ticket fixing.

"Those who seek to game the system by refusing to follow the rules need to be held accountable by the rule of law they swore to uphold," U.S. Attorney Zane David Memeger said.

The 77-count federal indictment said "the ticket fixing was pervasive and frequent," continued from July 2008 until September 2011 and cost the city an untold amount.

The indictment said that local politicians, including ward leaders and politically connected individuals — plus those with influential positions in business, labor, industry or society — asked Traffic Court judges or administrators for preferential treatment for constituents, relatives, friends and associates who had been issued citations.

The fallout

All defendants are charged with conspiracy, aiding and abetting, mail fraud and wire fraud. Some also face allegations of perjury and making false statements to the FBI.

- Administrative Judge of Traffic Court Michael Sullivan faces up to 440 years in prison and a $5.5 million fine.
- Traffic Court judge Michael Lowry faces a up to 205 years in prison and a $2.75 million fine.
- Former Traffic Court judge Robert Mulgrew faces up to 145 years in jail and a $2 million fine.
- Former Traffic Court judge Willie Singletary faces a maximum sentence of 490 years in jail and a $6.5 million fine.
- Former Traffic Court judge Thomasine Tynes could receive up to 230 years in prison and a $3.25 million fine.
- Chester County magisterial district judge Mark Bruno faces a maximum sentence of 60 years and a $750,000 fine.
- Former Traffic Court director of records William Hird could receive up to 315 years in jail and a $4.5 million fine.
- Other defendants include senior Traffic Court judge Fortunato N. Perri Sr. and judges from Bucks and Delaware counties.

Bicentennial Bell is temporarily shelved

OLD CITY. The National Park Service on Thursday removed Philadelphia's six-ton Bicentennial Bell from a 130-foot-tall brick tower near a former visitor center at Third and Chestnut streets and placed it into storage. The bell, cast in the same London foundry that in 1751 created the Liberty Bell, was a 1976 gift from Queen Elizabeth II celebrating the country's 200th birthday. Her trip to Philadelphia that year marked the first time a British monarch visited the city. The tower that until Thursday housed the bell is being demolished for the National Museum of the American Revolution. The bell will reportedly be relocated in Independence National Historic Park. San Fran mayor asks bars to curb Super Bowl booze sales

With his city's NFL team favored to win the Super Bowl and celebrations primed, San Francisco Mayor Edwin Lee is urging bartenders to voluntarily curb alcohol service and calling for revelers to drink in moderation on game day.

People should know their limits as they cheer the San Francisco 49ers when they face the Baltimore Ravens in New Orleans on Feb. 3, Lee told reporters.

"They ought to just be cognizant that an overindulgence in a celebratory way could be very hurtful to communities and to themselves," said Lee, 60, following a speech. BLOOMBERG

Child held hostage for third day after Ala. shooting

A standoff stretched into a third day on Thursday with an Alabama man accused of fatally shooting a school-bus driver and then taking a young boy hostage in an underground bunker equipped with electricity and food.

Law enforcement authorities remained tight-lipped about the delicate situation playing out in Midland City. Officials from local, state and federal agencies have been camped near the bunker since Tuesday, when a gunman demanded that a student be let off a bus carrying more than 20 children home from school. REUTERS

PICKING THE EASY TARGET

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

letters@metro.us

CNN=POLITICS

CNN's Tom Foreman is a regular on "AC360°" /www.ac360.com and "The Situation Room."

As a teenager hunting doves, I learned to choose my targets quickly. Two birds sweep in over the trees — which one do you aim for? The answer for the hunter is always "the one that is easier to hit."

So I watched with interest as D.C. lawmakers tackled the issue of gun control in a jam-packed, emotional hearing just a few days ago. Their success or failure in turning the pathos into meaningful legislation will depend on which target they choose.

The first target, a measureable reduction in gun violence, is hard to get into the crosshairs. In 2011, the FBI says "firearms were used in 67.8 percent of the nation's murders, 41.3 percent of the robberies and 21.2 percent of the aggravated assaults." In raw numbers, that means one of us pulled out a gun and pointed it at someone else at least 1,120,139 times.

Each incident brought its own circumstances. Some shooters were run-of-the-mill criminals. Some were deranged. Some were furious. Some may have been great fans of violent video games, and others were not. Some were bullied in school, and others were bullies.

Although the weapon of choice was often a handgun, the variety was vast: small and large calibers; single shots, revolvers and semi-autos; guns with extended magazines and guns without — each obtained in its own way.

Clearly many politicians — both for gun rights and gun control — would genuinely like to see less gun violence and to find the magic legislation that will produce fewer shots in the night, fewer heartbroken families and fewer horrifying headlines. But crafting such a law against that complicated background will be undeniably difficult.

Quoted

"Some were bullied in school, and others were bullies."

That's why they so often aim for the second target, the one that makes it look like they are trying to do something so they'll get credit from voters. You hold hearings, you express your outrage and you introduce measures that don't have a chance of passing or that will produce no meaningful results, just so you can say you did.

That's an easy target to hit, and, most often, a meaningless one.

High winds knock out power to homes in US Northeast

Rain and high winds lashed U.S. Northeast and mid-Atlantic states early Thursday, knocking out power to more than 330,000 homes and businesses as they braced for a coming snowstorm.

Gusty winds of up to 77 miles per hour battered parts of New England, and a high-wind advisory remained in effect until 6 p.m. for northern Connecticut, most of Massachusetts, and southern New Hampshire, the National Weather Service said.

Thunderstorms rolled across the Northeast early on Thursday morning, toppling trees and downing utility lines. Among the hardest-hit areas were Connecticut, where about 71,000 customers had no electricity; Long Island, with about 34,000 customers out; and New Jersey, where about 27,000 customers were without power, according to utility reports.

The state of Vermont warned residents on Thursday to brace for flash flooding from the storm, with heavy rains causing ice jams in rivers. Residents of low-lying areas were advised to seek higher ground immediately if water began to rise on local rivers. REUTERS

Senators attack Hagel, question his judgment

Republican lawmakers clashed with Chuck Hagel on Thursday at a hearing over his nomination to become the next U.S. defense secretary, attacking his judgment on war strategy and occasionally putting him on the defensive during a heated session.

Critics in Congress have sought to portray Hagel, a former Republican senator and decorated Vietnam War veteran, as soft on Iran and anti-Israel, charges Hagel strongly denied in testimony at the Senate Armed Services Committee hearing.

Republican panel members laid into Hagel, with influential Sen. John McCain threatening to vote against him as he questioned Hagel's judgment on the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, where Hagel opposed surges of American forces.

Even before Hagel started speaking, James Inhofe, the panel's senior Republican, called him "the wrong person to lead the Pentagon at this perilous and consequential time."

"Sen. Hagel's record is deeply troubling and out of the mainstream. Too often it seems he is willing to subscribe to a worldwide view that is predicated on appeasing our adversaries while shunning our friends," said Inhofe.

The committee also dwelt on chapters of modern U.S. history that still prompt passionate debate: from the Vietnam War, where Hagel served and was wounded, to President Ronald Reagan's call for nuclear disarmament and the 2003 invasion of Iraq. REUTERS

Syria warns of surprise response to Israel attack

Syria protested to the United Nations on Thursday over an Israeli air strike on its territory and warned of a possible "surprise" response.

The foreign ministry summoned the head of the U.N. force in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights to deliver the protest a day after Israel hit what Syria said was a military research center and diplomats said was a weapons convoy heading for Lebanon.

"Syria holds Israel and those who protect it in the Security Council fully responsible for the results of this aggression and affirms its right to defend itself, its land and sovereignty," Syrian television quoted it as saying.

The ministry said it considered Wednesday's Israeli attack to be a violation of a 1974 military disengagement agreement that followed their last major war, and demanded the U.N. Security Council condemn it unequivocally.

Israel has maintained total silence over the attack, as it did in 2007 when it bombed a suspected Syrian nuclear site — an attack that passed without Syrian military retaliation.

Arab Spring nations 'are now more oppressive'

Two years after the historic wave of revolutions, Arab populations have swapped one form of oppression for another, Human Rights Watch announced Thursday in its 2013 report documenting rights abuses in 90 countries.

"Euphoria has given way to despair and deep concern," Executive Director Kenneth Roth told reporters at the report launch in London. The 664-page report gave its primary focus to abuse of minority rights in the post-revolution states.

Egypt, described as the most important country in the region, was severely criticized for a constitution "filled with loopholes … and a contradiction between majoritarian rules and basic rights that needs to be resolved." The report notes an increase in prosecutions for dissent since the revolution, closure of independent media and arrest of NGO workers.

On Libya, Roth said "the major problem is that the government does not control a lot of the country." More than 3,000 people are being illegally held by militia formed to fight former dictator Muammar Gaddafi. The government is also criticized for enacting new laws cracking down on freedom of expression and religion.

Tunisia has fared better and was praised for an "inclusive" approach to its new constitution. This is supported by a recent report from international human-rights think tank Freedom House, which found that "Tunisia's police force that is significantly more accountable" since the ousting of former dictator Zine el-Abidine Ben Ali.

Roth went on to claim that troubles in Algeria and Mali were a direct consequence of the Arab revolution, but warned against interpreting the volatility as proving that "democracy is too dangerous" in the Arab world.

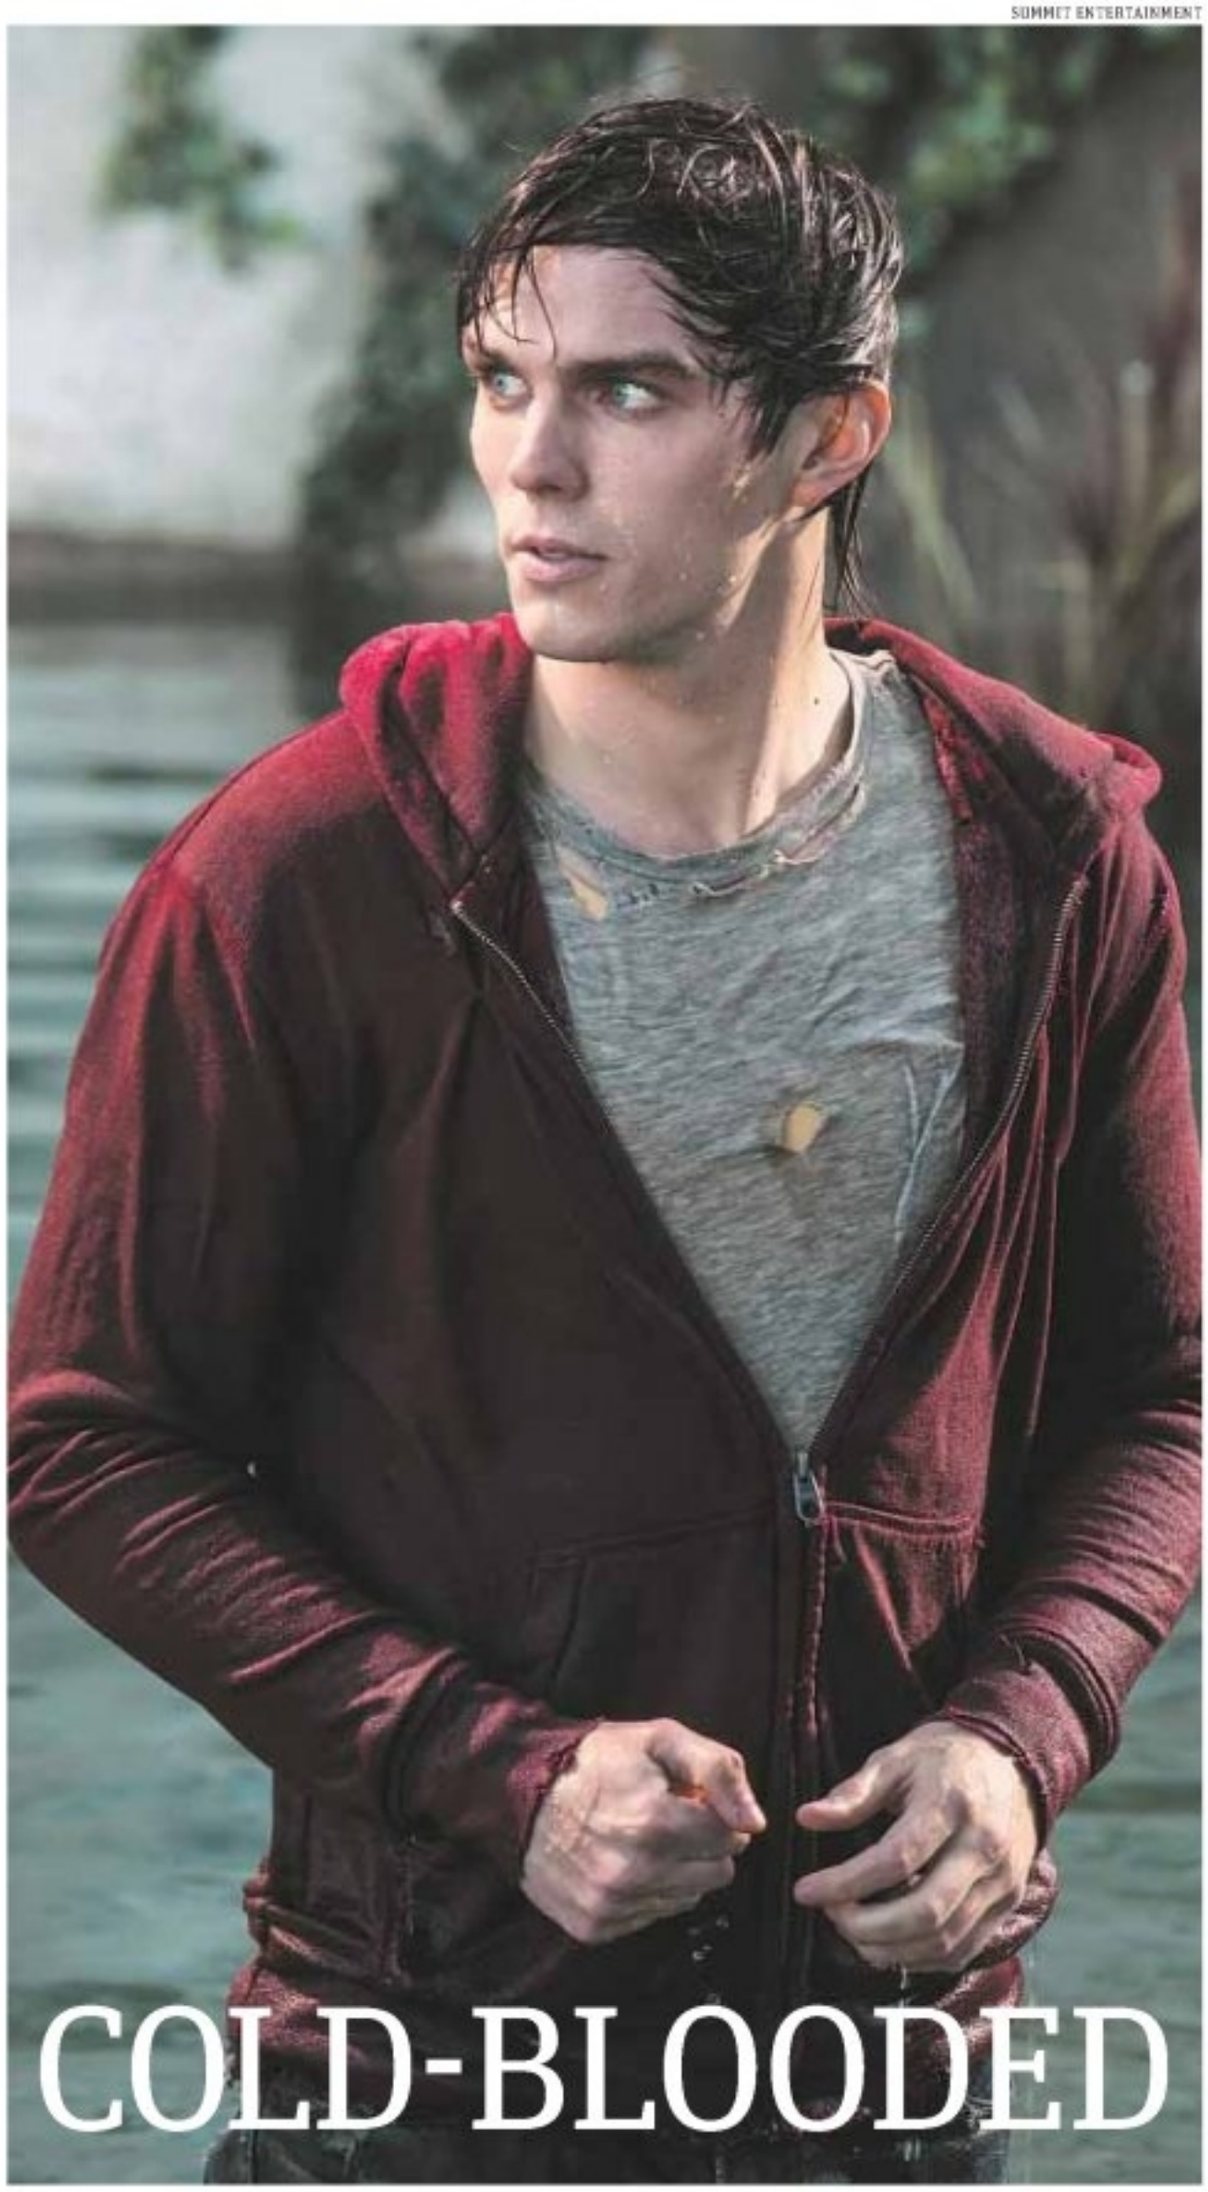
SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT



Nicholas Hoult has tackled trying to get the girl when you're an awkward tween (in "About a Boy"), a ruthless high-schooler (in TV's "Skins") and a blue-haired mutant (in "X-Men: First Class"). But those challenges pale in comparison to "Warm Bodies," in which he tries to win over a girl (Teresa Palmer) despite the fact that he's a flesh-eating zombie.

How tough is it doing a role that's basically one facial expression for most of the film?

Surprisingly easy, actually. [Laughs] Narrows down your options and what you have to do at work, and not a lot of dialogue to learn, which is beautiful. But yeah, I read the script and I was like, "This could be a cool film," and then I was like, "Oh, it's kind of tricky, though, isn't it?" You don't get to say a lot, and you've got to move and act like a zombie, but you've also got to have this audience care for you and want you to succeed and have this girl care for you enough and fall for you, and there's a lot to do. With Teresa, it was just basically watching her do scenes the whole time, her just doing monologue after monologue and then I'd go, "Yeah, keep you safe. Hungry. Eat. Whatever." [Laughs]

Have you heard every zombie joke in the world at this point?

You know what, I've made a few terrible ones myself. I've said, like, "Oh, he's a character I really liked and wanted to bring to life." Idiot. I said of the scenes with me and Rob Corddry I found it really difficult not to corpse [which is British slang for laughing during a scene]. So I've made a few terrible zombie jokes, but I haven't actually been on the receiving end of that many so far.

OK, zombies versus vampires. Where do you stand?

Who would win in a fight? Or the transition from vampire to zombie time?

As far as pop culture.

You know what? I'm trying to think. Aside from "Twilight," what other vampire films have their been particularly recently? That's the prominent one. To be honest with you, I would probably have to go with the zombie thing just because I really like "Shaun of the Dead" and "Zombieland" and those sort of things, and "28 Days Later" and stuff, so I think I'd go for the zombie — and not just because I played one in this film.

After this film, do you think you'd have trouble getting excited about doing a more traditional romantic comedy?

I don't know. I mean, I'm a sucker for a rom-com. You know, you feel good and you get all gooey. But I wouldn't want to do one of those ones that's very run-of-the-mill, out of the box, off you go, pay $10 to go and see it and then sit there and nothing new happens. So it's tricky. I'd like to be able to do all types of films. Action, drama, romance, all of them.

Just this year you've got films in several different genres coming out.

Yeah, I've got a fairy tale family adventure movie, "Jack the Giant Slayer." There's mild peril. There's giants that want to eat humans, so you know, I wouldn't take a really young kid to it.

PACINO, UNCHAINED

The legendary actor swears that he's mellowed out in recent years While promoting his latest film, 'Stand Up Guys,' Pacino explains why he'll never retire

"Stand Up Guys" finds Al Pacino playing an aging criminal released from prison after 28 years and taking stock of his life while trying to prove he's still got some life in him. So it seems like a perfect time to check in on Pacino himself and see how he's holding up. Here's what we learned from our chat with the 72-year-old actor.

He has no plans for retirement: "I don't even know what that means, really. It's all about retiring to what? What is retirement about? Sometimes I wonder, why am I doing this? I think it is understanding what you're capable of doing. If a role interests me, excites me or challenges me, then I don't see any reason why I wouldn't try it. If the roles become far and fewer between, then that's OK too because then I'll find other things to do."

The actor feels far from accomplished as a director, though: "I feel that I'm doing the wrong thing. Sometimes when I do a movie and I'm sitting seeing a preview of the movie I'm thinking — because the film is some place else, usually in the editing room, miles away — I often think I hope that somebody grabs hold of that film right now and recuts it and makes it good. [Laughs] I've made about four or five of my own films. Only one has seen the light of day, but I do have other films I've made with my own money. Spielberg once said to me: 'Never put your own money in a movie,' and he was right. But at the same time, it was fun to do and I'm glad I did it."

He admits he wasn't always easy to direct: "There's no doubt that I've gotten easier to work with. There's no doubt. They tell me that. [Laughs] I think that when I was younger I was much more difficult. If I've learned anything from directing, I learned what directors go through with actors.

A certain amount of empathy is gotten out of that by doing it yourself."

The joys of poker

Throughout his career on the stage and screen, Al Pacino has had one hobby that keeps him happy: holding a regular poker game. "What I like more about poker more than anything else is it's a game. It's for very low stakes, and there's a friendliness in it," Pacino says. "And I enjoy the guys that I get, the group, because a lot of them are old friends. I like that gathering. There's something comforting about it. Sometimes I just lose track of the game. People confer, and sometimes things come out and people talk. And I enjoy that. ... It's very zen. It's like meditation."

Motherhood's dark side sees the light

TREVOR J. MARTIN

▶ Suli Stein plays three roles in "Chimera," onstage this weekend.

The chimera is a mythical creature with the head of a goat, the body of a lion and the tail of a snake. In their play of the same name, former Pig Iron members Suli Holum and Deborah Stein examine a real-world counterpart that is perhaps even stranger: a woman who discovers that she is her own twin sister.

"Chimera" was inspired by an episode of the NPR show Radiolab, which told the story of a woman who discovered that she wasn't genetically the mother of her own children. It was eventually determined that she had absorbed a potential twin while in utero.

"I was fascinated by how science is showing us these pieces of our life histories that we don't have any framework for understanding psychologically or philosophically," Holum says. She and Stein devised a solo show in which Holum plays three roles, which won acclaim as part of the Public Theater's Under the Radar Festival in New York.

"Deborah and I were interested in exploring the 'dark side of motherhood,'" Holum continues. "One of the greatest cultural taboos we can think of is a mother who abandons her child, so we're looking at where these new scientific stories meet the ancient stories that we as a culture rely on to make sense of our lives."

Wings have their day

No Super Bowl party is complete without them The star player here, buttermilk, keeps the wings extra juicy

Six points to whoever's bringing these this Sunday.

Weekend recipe

Easy Grilled Buffalo Wings

Ingredients:

- 1½ cups (12 ounces) mild to medium hot sauce
- ½ cup buttermilk
- ½ teaspoon garlic powder
- 3 pounds chicken wings, separated into 2 pieces and wing tips discarded
- Vegetable oil, for oiling the grill
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter (½ stick), melted
- Blue cheese dressing (optional)
- Celery sticks (optional)

Directions:

1 Place 1 cup of the hot sauce, the buttermilk and garlic powder in a large resealable plastic bag and stir to combine. Add the wings and seal the bag, pressing out any excess air. Turn the bag to coat the wings evenly. Let marinate in the refrigerator, turning occasionally, for at least two hours or up to 12 hours.

2 Heat an outdoor grill to medium high (about 375°F to 425°F). When the grill is ready, use tongs to rub the grate with several layers of paper towels dipped in vegetable oil. Remove the wings from the marinade, letting any excess drip off, and discard the marinade. Place the wings on the grate in a single layer so they're not touching (if needed, cook them in batches). Cover the grill and cook, flipping the wings occasionally with tongs, until they're no longer pink at the bone and the skin is slightly charred in spots, about 25 minutes total.

3 When the wings are almost ready, combine the remaining ½ cup hot sauce and the melted butter in a large bowl and set aside. Add the cooked wings to the bowl and toss to coat. Serve immediately with blue cheese dressing and celery sticks, if desired.

Spice it up

The spiciness of these wings will depend on your hot sauce. We prefer mild to medium spiciness from brands like Frank's RedHot or Crystal, but use a hotter sauce if you prefer.

Today, Nicholas Hoult has joined the tweeting masses, Dwayne Johnson is serious about exercise, Mark Duplass expects more from his subconscious and Sarah Silverman is feeling very accomplished.

Dorothy Robinson's take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Dan Schachner: A doggone good ref

Dan Schachner has not been killed by cuteness. Far from it: The actor was all business refereeing "Puppy Bowl IX," the annual Animal Planet game that pits one adorable team of puppies against another. He talked with us about making sure the pups play a clean game, the newest addition of hedgehog cheerleaders and about looking out for No. 1 (and 2).

What precautions do you have in place to make sure the Puppy Bowl doesn't become a "Poopy Bowl"?
Even with all the precautions, there really is no way to prevent a "Poopy Bowl." These pups only have one thing on their mind — playing a great game and scoring as many touchdowns as possible. If an on-field accident should occur (and they do), we need to act fast to clean up the "foul" before it affects the action on the field. Puppies will be puppies, even when they're playing football in a mini stadium.

Have there been any rumors of off-field puppy doping?
There is a rigorous medical exam and physical for all the pups. We can't have them disgrace "Puppy Bowl's" good name after all. They are aware of the strict consequences if any tests should come back positive. The kittens, on the other hand, are addicted to cat nip, but we go easy on them since the are always nervous before the halftime show. I'm joking. Cat nip is a serious problem for kitties in America.

Baby hedgehogs will be the cheerleaders. Can they get the crowd going?
These are tough hedgehogs with a lot of spirit! Personally, I think they out-pep last year's Piggy Pep Squad but don't quote me on that. You'll see the hedgehogs in tutus with miniature footballs rooting for their favorite pups throughout the game on Sunday.

Who will be MVP?

I feel like Chestnut is a shoo-in for MVP (Most Valuable Puppy). Do you have dibs on anyone?
Chestnut definitely plays a great game. That little pup doesn't stop for anything! Personally, I'm a big fan of Oscar, a 15-week-old Dachshund who's favorite dish is weiner schnitzel. I would keep an eye on him if I were you.

ANIMAL PLANET

▶ Dan Schachner will never pay more attention to where he steps than during the action on the field.

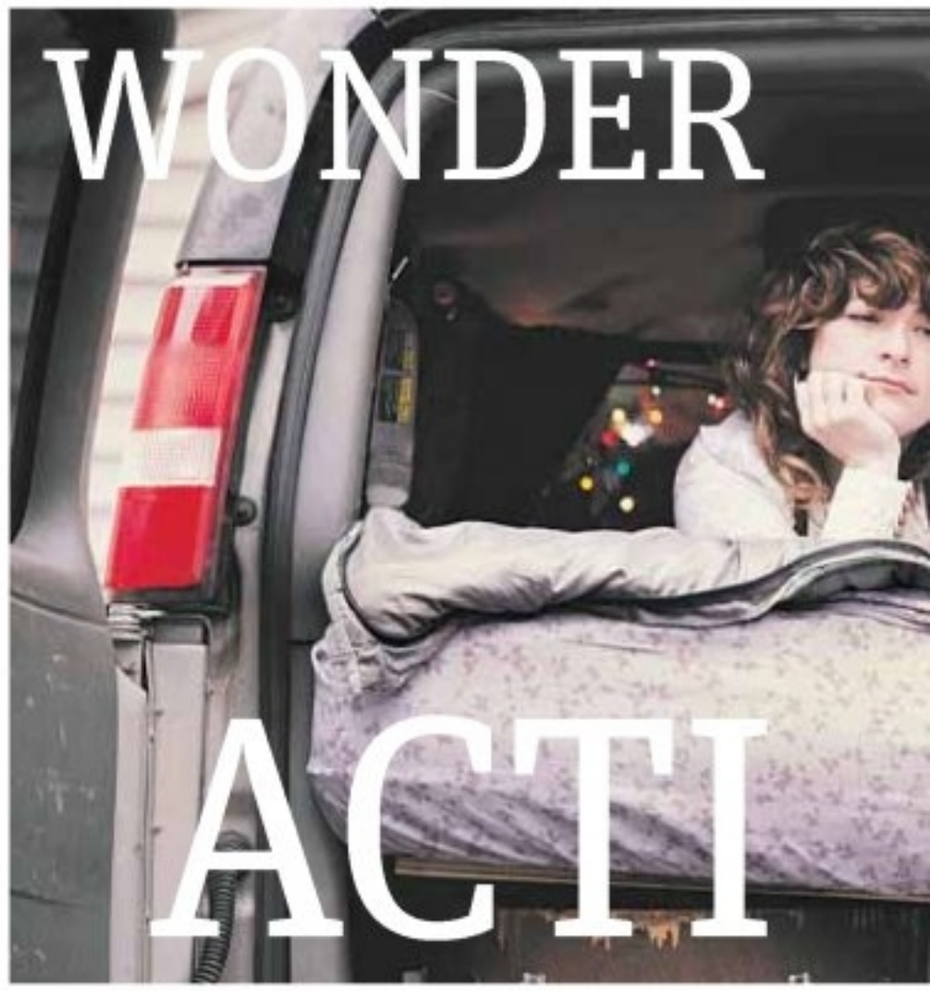
Black History

Black History Month begins tomorrow, and if there's a better soundtrack to celebrate it with than nearly eight hours of hard, uncut funk, then you need to let us know. Find the playlist at www.metro.us/ songza and www.songza.com/listen/damn-right-i-am-somebody-songza. The playlist is called "Damn Right I Am Somebody" and it's all about bravado, tell-it-like-it-is soul and funk jams, celebrating self-reliance, self-confidence and self-respect. It features artists like Bobby Byrd, Rufus and James Brown (pictured). Right on, sisters and brothers!

— Songza is a streaming platform that mines years of music history and today's music blogs for the best gems, so you don't have to. The company offers thousands of expertly-curated playlists for free on the Web, iPhone and iPad.



WONDER ACTI

Cary Ann Hearst and Michael Trent take on the form of Shovels & Rope The couple discuss keeping the chemistry onstage and in the van

Husband and wife team Cary Ann Hearst and Michael Trent have spent the last five years in their van. The Charleston, S.C. couple, who perform rousing country folk under the moniker of Shovels & Rope, insist that they wouldn't have it any other way.

"We knew that we wanted to be on the road together and not separately," says Hearst.

The telepathic connection that they share as musicians carries through into their personal relationship. "We call each other the Wonder Twins," says Hearst. "We can tell

"'O' Be Joyful' in all things

Trent contends that the limitations of having just two musicians keeps things fun.

"Sometimes all of our stuff breaks and all we have is our voices and a shaker. Sometimes that's the best part of the show," he says.

This electric looseness Trent describes is what makes the audience sometimes feel like Shovels & Rope are making it up as they go along. And in a sense, they are.

"There's a lot of thought that goes into [our music] when we are riding around, but we don't really have a lot of chance to rehearse it until we are on the stage."

who is struggling or what they are struggling with at that moment without really talking about it."

The struggling has been paying off lately. In August, they were playing small clubs and this week they hit "Late Night with David Letterman" on Wednesday, followed by a string of bigger-venue shows.

The key to this sudden success is their mid-2012 release "'O' Be Joyful," the duo's first release as Shovels & Rope (their 2008 debut was released under their full names with "Shovels & Rope" as the title) and a lo-fi country gem ripe for discovery.

As for their charmingly rough-shod arrangements, immortalized in the lyrics of their stomping barn-burner "Birmingham" (where the two sing of "making something out of nothing" with "two old guitars like a shovel and rope"), Hearst demurely says that it was fate, not choice, that led them down the minimalist path.

"[The arrangements] had done the trick for us in the bars," says Hearst. "We try to make the it exciting using whatever our four arms and four legs and voices can do."

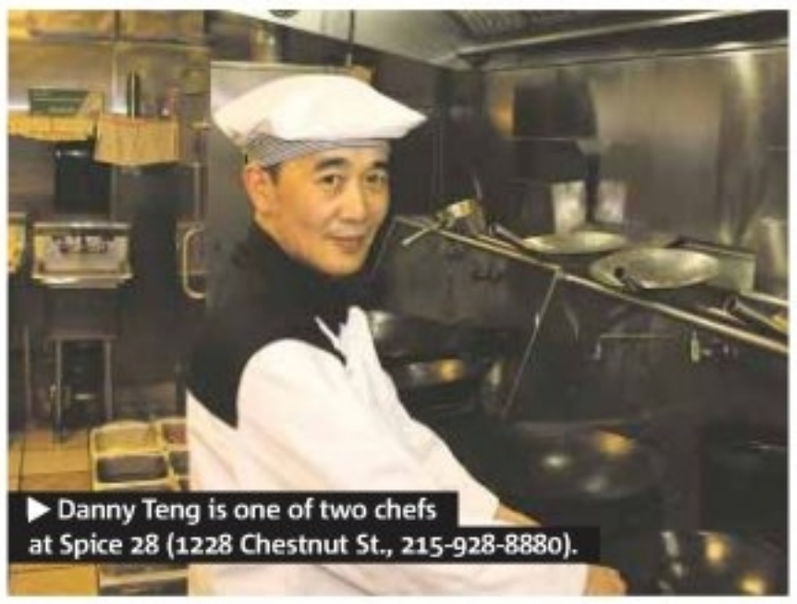
At the crossroads of classic and contemporary

Hot Chef

Since its opening last summer, Spice 28 has made a name for itself as a left-hand/right-hand duel of authentic and fusion Asian meals. Danny Teng is one of the two chefs creating the inspired dishes in Midtown Village.



▶ Danny Teng is one of two chefs at Spice 28 (1228 Chestnut St., 215-928-8880).

There are two chefs working here — you and the chef known as "Mister Ma." How does that influence the menu?
Chef Ma is great. He is excellent in cooking all levels of spicy dishes and an expert in Szechuan/Sichuan with the use of many varieties of Chinese spices. I am more an expert in Thai, traditional Chinese food and have been creating a new class of Asian-fusion style dishes.

How long have you lived in Philly?
Not long. I lived and worked in New York City for a long time. I came to Philly a couple months prior to the opening of Spice 28. I love to live and work in Philly even though my family is still in New York. I love the environment and the peace here, as it was always very busy in New York.

Dynamic duo

Is there a famous duo that you can compare yourself to? Batman and Robin? Sonny and Cher?

Not exactly. Batman and Robin are good ones. They are all heroes, who help people. I love them. Chef Ma and I both work well together.

Where do you bring visiting family and friends?
I always brought them to see the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall.

How do you like working in Midtown Village?
I like that there are many different kind of restaurants next to Spice 28.

Where do you hang out after work?
El Vez, Sampan, Buddakan and others — to eat!

Where do you go on your day off?
I sometimes go back New York City to be with my family.

Horoscope

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Because you've been in the thoughts of someone dear to you and who resides at a considerable distance, there's an excellent possibility that you'll get a call from him or her.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. It's imperative that you keep quiet about what you've been told in strict confidence. If you promised that you wouldn't breathe a word to anyone, don't break your vow.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. The enthusiasm and optimism you show will have a contagious effect on your associates, which will help you in return. You need others' feedback as much as they need your input.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. One of the reasons you're likely to do better than most of your peers is that you'll be cognizant of the small but significant details that others totally ignore. Good for you.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. What makes life more comfortable and enjoyable during this cycle is associating with people whose political and religious views parallel yours. They'll make you feel more at ease.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. With your natural ability to ferret out information that others are reluctant to reveal, you'll need to be especially mindful to keep things to yourself.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Because partnerships are favored, you could find yourself involved in several such arrangements for different purposes. Each one should work out well.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Both your intuition and logic will be especially keen at this point. It's a good thing, too, because each will be instrumental in helping you resolve issues.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. A line of communication could be opened to someone you've been anxious to contact, though it may not be an easy one. Be prepared to make a concerted effort.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Do not get discouraged if your achievements do not necessarily measure up to your expectations. The important thing is that you're moving forward, even if it's only one step at a time.

Dem should douse his house fire first

RE: "OSCAR-WORTHY PERFORMANCE BY GOP" (METRO, JAN. 31) It's one thing to publish letters that attempt to make a valid argument against the GOP and the policies it supports. It's completely pointless and a waste of space to publish letters like Robert La Rosa's about giving an Oscar to the GOP. Was his point that he feels the GOP is "pretending" to work in the best interests of the people of the U.S. and your editors agree with him so his letter was published? He's entitled to his opinion and I have mine about people like Mr. La Rosa who blindly follow the Democrats and their policies without stopping to think about the long-term ramifications of them. There's plenty of criticism that can made to people on both sides of the aisle, but people like Mr. La Rosa never criticize any Democrats. When President Obama was a senator in 2006, he made a speech explaining why he was voting against raising the debt ceiling and in that speech he said: "Washington is shifting the burden of bad choices today onto the backs of our children and grandchildren" and he called it "irresponsible" and "unpatriotic." Now he wants Congress to raise it without hesitation and he said it's "absurd" to even entertain the idea of not raising it. That's pure hypocrisy.

Militia: Not just you, your buddies and your shotguns

RE: "SECOND AMENDMENT PROTECTS RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS" (METRO, JAN. 31) First of all, the framers of our Constitution gave us all a weapon against thugs and tyranny: the government established under the Constitution.

I have yet to see a constitution, anywhere in the world, which enshrines a right of armed revolt against the very government it establishes. We only have to look to the suppression of the Whisky rebellion in 1794 to see the fallacy of the contention that the Second Amendment was set up to resist tyranny. Second, the founding fathers did indeed view well-regulated, well-disciplined and well-organized militias when they wrote the Second Amendment. They know that a group of armed men does not constitute a "militia" and they remembered that poorly-trained militias cost us battles during the Revolution.

SUPER BOWL XLVII: RAVENS vs. 49ERS, 6:30 p.m. (CBS)

3 Reckoning day

Ravens, 49ers battle for Lombardi in New Orleans ◗ Harbaugh brothers, Ray Lewis lead national headlines ◗ Metro looks at some more interesting storylines

Wait, are there really two brothers coaching against each other in the Super Bowl? Does Joe Flacco really have some scant ties to Philadelphia? Is Ray Lewis really calling it quits after this game? While the rest of the country debates these hot-button issues, we take a look at some more under-the-radar storylines to watch in Super Bowl XLVII. The big game is scheduled for Sunday down in New Orleans (6:30 p.m., CBS).

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Ray Lewis will play his final NFL game Sunday in New Orleans. How will the Ravens' linebacker be remembered by the fans?

1 How will Ray Lewis be remembered? — OK, so we had to touch on this subject in some way. But instead of building up all his past accomplishments and riding him off into the sunset, we wonder what will Ray Lewis' legacy be? Lewis, once a murder suspect, is a man who devoted his life to God after a 2000 double-homicide case. He has also been mentioned as the greatest middle linebacker to ever play in the NFL. However, a recent report surfaced earlier this week saying that he used performance-enhancing drugs to recover from a triceps injury. On the football field, there's no doubt he's an all-time great … but — win or lose Sunday night — he will always have his major detractors.

2 Is Colin Kaepernick the real deal? — The 49ers' use of the pistol formation is drawing praise from coaches and pundits all over the country, a new wrinkle that many NFL teams have incorporated into their offenses. But Kaepernick jumped in as the starter mid-season and opponents didn't have much film to watch on him or time to adjust on the fly. But is it a gimmick? We don't think so. Kaepernick has all the tools: big, accurate arm, speedy legs and a high football IQ. Still, he has to prove it Sunday. No "athletic" quarterback has ever won the Super Bowl.

3 What about the Rooney Rule? — While neither head coach is black, the subject of race is very much on the grand stage in this one. The Ravens boast two minority coaches on their staff — offensive coordinator Jim Caldwell and run-game coordinator Juan Castillo — and boast a black GM in Ozzie Newsome, who would be the second black GM (Giants' Jerry Reese) to hoist the Lombardi Trophy. If the Ravens win, maybe we'll get some more minority head coaches and executives in the league.

Jersey Joe Flacco

Ravens QB started his career in southern New Jersey Trained for NFL at TEST Academy Has risen to biggest stage in football

Joe Flacco's path to the NFL — and Super Bowl XLVII — was as unassuming as the quarterback himself.

When Flacco committed to Pittsburgh in late December of his senior year at Audubon High School, southeast of Camden, N.J., he wasn't a big-name recruit.

After transferring to Delaware, he led the Blue Hens to the playoffs twice and the championship game in 2007. Flacco began preparing for the NFL Draft with former Giants quarterback Scott Brunner at TEST Football Academy in New Jersey. Flacco's successful postseason hasn't been a surprise to Brunner.

"Joe was an extremely talented quarterback when he came to us out of college," Brunner said. "Like most guys preparing for the NFL, they rarely need a major overhaul, but rather modifications to their technique."

Flacco has thrown for 853 yards this postseason, with eight touchdowns and no interceptions.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Flacco's family is from Haddon Township, N.J., where his parents still live.

More than anything, it is his calm, unflappable style that is translating to wins.

"There were many who thought he needed to show a more fiery personality," Brunner said. "I knew that if he tried to be something he wasn't, his teammates would see right through that act. ... I think the leadership torch of the Ravens is now being passed to Joe."

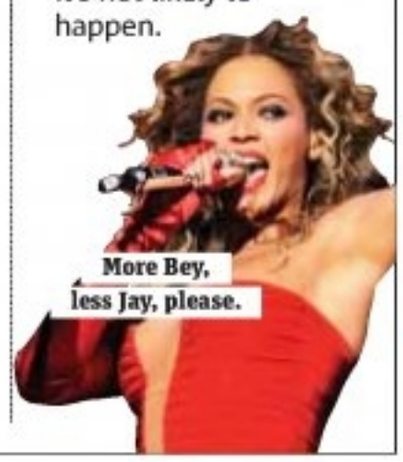
Get prop-ing

Sure, you can bet on the Super Bowl itself (the Niners are at -4), but the real fun is in prop bets.

How long will the national anthem be?
Odds: Over 2:10 (Even), Under (-140)
Our take: Alicia Keys is known for stretching out chords, but the recent average is 1:40, so we go under.

Will Jay-Z join Beyonce during halftime show?
Odds: Yes (-105), No (-135)
Our take: As much as we would love to see the king and queen of hip-hop perform together, it's not likely to happen.



More Bey, less Jay, please.

Audubon mayor bets on Flacco

Mayor John Ward, of Joe Flacco's hometown of Audubon, N.J., accepted a gentleman's wager from the mayor of Colin Kaepernick's hometown.

Mayor John Lazar, of Turlock, Calif., and Ward are backing their native sons. The loser must wear the opposing team's jersey to the next Council meeting. METRO
